North Korea Increasing Third World Arms Sales

By Clyde Haberman

New York Times Service TOKYO --- North Korea is stepping up its arms sales and military training in other countries, according to diplomats and other experts on the region.

Some experts say that North Korea's need to generate cash may be a reason not only for the new arms sales but also far beightened smug-gling by its embassies abroad.

The experts also say that a power struggle may be under way in Pyongyang that could partly explain the involvement of North Korea in recent violence abroad. On Oct. 9, a bomb exploded in Ran-goon, Burma, killing 17.5 but Ko-reans, including four government ministers. Burma blamed North Korea and severed relations, and even such North Korean allies as China expressed dismay.

Bonn Prosecutor Moves to Charge Economics Chief In Payoff Scandal

By James M. Markham New York Times Service

BONN — Concluding a two-year investigation into West Ger-many's higgest political corruption scandal, the Bonn prosecutor's office on Tuesday announced that it had asked the Bundestag to lift the parliamentary immunity of Eco-nomics Minister Otto Lambsdorff so that he could be indicted for taking bribes from the giant Flick holding company.

At a packed news conference,
Johannes Wilhelm, a prosecutor, said that Hans Frideriehs, a former economics minister and chairman of West Germany's second largest bank, had been indicated along with three other figures allegedly involved in a massive payoff scheme that has tarred all of the nation's established parties.

The disclosure of the legal steps against Mr. Lambsdorff, a key poliician in the small Free Democratic Party and a sharp-tongued freeenterprise advocate, was a severe blow to Chancellor Helmut Kohl's squabbling center-right coalition. The move appeared to open opportunities for Franz Josef Strauss, the conservative Bavarian, to demand a cabinet post or a greater role in formulating national policy. It was the first time in the 34-year history of the Federal Republic that a prosecutor had moved to indict a cabinet minister.

The Flick affair, dubbed "Watergate by the Rhine," has over the past two years cast doubt on the probity of scores of poblicians who appear to have received generous payoffs from a company whose founder was condemned at the Nu-remberg war crimes tribunal for bankrolling Hitler. Their embar-rassing testimonies and Flick memoranda have been leaked to the weekly Der Spiegel, which has re-lentlessly pursued the story.

The legal action announced Tuesday, which had been anticipated, focused on a successful effort by Flick to obtain tax rebates on a capital gains of $703 million arising from the sale of a 29-percent interest in Daimler Benz in 1975. The monies were reinvested in W.R. Grace & Co. of New York and the United States Filter Corp.

On the ground that this transaction was "especially beneficial to the national economy," Mr. Frider-ichs, in 1976, and his successor. Mr. Lambsdorff, in 1978, approved tax waivers for Flick totaling $175 mil-

The prosecutor's office said it had determined that in order to obtain these lucrative judgments, Eberhard von Brauchitsch, the company's deputy chairman, had paid Mr. Friderichs $140,740 in Lambsdorff $50,000 in 1977 and Mr. Lambsdorff $50,000 in 1977 and 1980. Mr. von Brauchitsch, who kept meticulous records of his alleged payoffs, was indicted, as were Horst Ludwig Riemer, a former Free Democratic economics minis-ter in North Rhine Westphalia state, and Manfred Nemitz, a Flick employee.

At the time of the alleged kick-backs, Mr. Friderichs and Mr. Lambsdorff were cabinet members in a coalition government led by Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, a So-cial Democrat. If found guilty on the charges of corruption, the defendants could receive prison sentences of six months to five years.

Franzbruno Eulencamp, the chief Bonn prosecutor, said at the news conference that he did not believe that "personal enrichment in the strict sense" was the motiva-tion for taking the bribes. In their efforts to explain the Flick affair, many politicians have maintained that the payoffs reflect not so much venality as inadequate methods for subsidizing West German poliocal

Lengthy START Session Seen To Indicate Talks Will Go On

By John Vinocur New York Times Service

GENEVA - The United States and the Soviet Union held a new session Tuesday of the strategic arms limitation talks known as START and agreed to negotiate again on Thursday.

Coming after the Soviet suspension last week of talks on middlerange weapons, the Soviet willingness to continue discussions on intercontinental missiles was regarded as a sign that the START talks would continue in 1984 after a holiday recess.

American officials said before the meeting Tuesday that, if the Soviet Union had wanted to leave the strategic weapons talks in a dramatic way to heighten tensions. Tuesday's session provided the log-

Mr. Karpov, according to other descriptions of the negotiating session, complained about the beginning of deployment of U.S. Pershing-2 and cruise missiles in West Germany and Britain — the action that the Soviet Union cited as its reason for halting negotiations on middle-range weapons.

If the deployment continues, Mr.

Mrs. Walesa Permitted to Visit Oslo

WARSAW (AP) — Lech Walesa's wife, Danuta, will be allowed to travel to Norway to accept his Nobel Peace Prize on Dec. 10, the Polish government spokesman, Jerzy Urban, said Tuesday.

But Mrs. Walesa said she would not make the journey unless a friend designated by Mr. Walesa to accompany her is granted a travel visa. Mr. Walesa, who was awarded the prize for his leadership of the nowoutlawed Solidarity labor movement, had chosen his wife, their son, Bogdan, 13, and Tadeusz Mazowiecki, 56, a union adviser, to accept the prize on his behalf.

Mr. Urban said that Mrs. Walesa and her son could go, but Mr. Mazowiecki said he was informed by passport officials Tuesday that they could not consider his case before Dec. 12, two days after the awards ceremony — effectively refusing him permission to leave the country.

Mrs. Walesa said she would "refuse to go if Mazowiecki is denied a

British Missile Shoots Down Exocet

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain has for the first time shot down a low-flying anti-ship missile with another missile, destroying a French Exocet in sea trials, defense experts said Tuesday.

A Sea Wolf missile fired from a destroyer shot down a sea-skimming Exocet off the coast of Wales last week, the Defense Ministry said. The French missile, which skims three meters (10 feet) above the waves at 500 miles (800 kilometers) an hour, was the type that sank two British ships in the Falkland Islands war last year.

"It is the first time, as far as I know, that a missile has shot down another missile at low level," a naval consultant, Captain Roger Villar, said. The Sea Wolf, guided to its target by an antomatic ship-based radar system, is the only missile developed in the West specifically to knock out

Dutch Union Ends Contacts With State

AMSTERDAM (AP) — The Federation of Dutch Labor Unions has suspended all official contacts with the Dutch government to protest proposed cuts of 3 percent in the wages of employees in the public sector. More, agreed to the relocation of Magopa in consultations with the would continue "at least until parliament has voted on the salary cut issue." U.K. Papers Print, Picketing Goes On LONDON (AP) - All of Britain's national daily newspapers were printing Tuesday night, but the printers' union that shut down six of them four days ago defied the law again by mounting fresh pickets outside a plant near Manchester.

The National Graphical Association said 3,000 members were converg-

Printers on all the national dailies walked out when the union was fixed for illegal picketing at the Warrington plant. Though that strike ended Sunday night, more than half the papers fired their printers and refused to reopen without assurances that there would be no further London shutdowns over the Warrington dispute. No ironclad guarantees were obtained from the union leadership, the publishers said, but union locals provided sufficient informal assurances of good faith for the papers to

Donald L. Gilman, a long-range forecasting specialist for the weather service, said the prediction was based partly on indications that highpressure systems that cause frigid weather in the continental United States would remain in Siberia instead of centering over Alaska or western Cana-da. But he predicted pockets of unusually cold weather in the Great Plains and Great Lakes above normal winter temperatures in a belt from South Carolina to Long Island, New York, and a 55-percent chance of above average precipitation.

Average January temperatures in the region range from 6.4 degrees centigrade (43.5 Fahrenheit) to -2.4 centigrade (27.7 Fahrenheit).

Mr. Gilman noted that the El Niño weather system in the equatorial Pacific was "washing out" and was not expected to disrupt global patterns as it did last winter. As a result, he said, "California should have a much quieter winter this year." Although he has been accurate on 65 percent of his long-range forecasts in recent years, Mr. Gilman cautioned that long-range forecasting has "no strong scientific backbone."

- But his predictions for the northcentral region were underscored Monday when the second blizzard in less than a week hit the upper Midwest. When Allies Diverge

A striking, even ominous finding of the Atlantic Institute-Louis Harris poll that the International Herald Tribune co-sponsored — we published the results yesterday — is the fall of West European confidence in cooperation with the United States. The fall was more severe in the German Federal Republic, where there was, proportionately, a 35 percent drop from the level of confidence expressed by West Germans a year ago, or from 53 percent to 34 percent in absolute terms. The drop was nearly as great in the Netherlands. In France, Norway and Italy it was substantial, approaching a 25 percent fall from last year's levels. Only in Britain was there no change, and nowhere has there been a rise — except, interestingly enough, in the United States, where trans-Atlantic cooperation is now deemed important to Western security by 40 percent of persons polled, up from 36 percent before.

Clearly related to this finding is a sharp rise in the fear of war, most of all in America. Nearly twice as many Americans put the threat of war as of great concern to them and their families, compared to our previous poll just six months ago. The percentage of respondents expressing this fear of war is higher in the United States than in any other of the polled countries except Italy.

Were it not for these U.S. findings, the rise in war fears and the fall in trans-Atlantic confidence might be thought a result of the Euromissile controversy. As it is, one wonders if they were not the precondition for that controversy. The change in West German opinion recorded in this poll certainly is reflected in the shift that has taken place in the stand of the Social Democratic Party on Euromissiles and in the expanded sympathy for the peace movement that other polls in West Germany have recorded.

But why are Americans frightened? Why do 24 percent of the Americans polled list inadequate defense as a matter of great personal concern? In no other nation is this an issue for more than a tenth of the respondents - and that only in Japan, which has made it national policy to have only minimal defenses. At the same time, 25 percent of Americans polled think that the U.S. military buildup is one of the factors most responsible for current international tension; 52 percent say it is the Soviet buildup.

Americans are the most concerned about the spread of Soviet influence in the world, superpower rivalry in the Third World, European neutralism and pacifism, and European willingness to make concessions to the Russians. The latter two issues are listed by 20 and 25 percent respectively of the Americans polled, whereas they are serious issues for only 7 and 8 percent of the Europeans themselves. The French, among the Europeans, are the most concerned, 11 percent expressing worry about neutralism and 15 percent about concessions to Russia.

Twenty percent of Americans favor a Western nuclear policy of permanent superiority over the Soviet Union. This is agreed to, on average, by 3 percent of all the other allied people polled. The closest to America on this issue again is France, at 6 percent.

What comes through clearly is a very big and important difference between bow Americans view their security, and the prospect of war, and how the European allies and the Japanese see the situation. Americans are more fearful of war, more anxious about what the Soviet Union is up to, more concerned with neutralism more worried that their country is not strong enough, more anxious to possess nuclear superiority over the Soviet Union than any of the allies indeed, on most of these points, more so by very large margins. Here, surely, is the reason for the fall in trans-Atlantic confidence. The American vision of the world today is not really that of the allies. Policy divergence follows the perceptual gap. The situation is getting worse. The alliance is in trouble because its institutions of common action no longer rest upon a foundation of agreement on what the threat is, bow grave it is and what should be done about it.

The Reagan administration came to office in the firm belief that what the allies wanted from Washington was a strong America willing to stand up to the Russians. They were wrong. The West Europeans wanted a strong - and consistent - American government that would talk to the Russians. There lies the problem. And a solution now can be found only if the United States and the West European and Japanese governments settle down to talking seriously with one another, listening with equal seriousness to what their friends have to say, and acting upon what they hear.

The Not-Quite-Marshal Had Best Beware

By Leopold Unger

BRUSSELS — General Wojciech Jaruzelski lacks one title, but he is sure to get it soon enough. He will be marshal, or generalissimo, and equal, on paper at least, to Stalin. He has already gone Stalin one better by becoming the first career military officer to be the dictator of a communist state.

General Jaruzelski's decision to give up the Defense Ministry is not the renunciation it might seem to be. That announcement —in a cabinet shake-up ostensibly intended to improve the regime's economic per-formance — included his appoint-ment as commander in chief of the army and chairman of the KOK. the national defense committee.

The KOK is independent of the executive and has the final say on all questions of defense as well as on "social-economic" problems. It has the power to declare a state of siege or a state of war, and to maintain law and order. Thus the KOK can control all public life. It is a state within a state, a junta in itself - a cil that regulated martial law. General Jaruzelski becomes a super-premier. It is an ideal post for the day, thought to be near, when he commissars during the December 1981 putsch are still in place. relinquishes the premiership.

The maneuver is meant less to Poland is at another historic increase the power of an already allpowerful party leader than to tighten the army's grip on the country.

The goal is to militarize the regime. Nearly 40 years after the Soviet Union imposed a communist state on Poland, it is not the party but the army - and its police - that is the backbone of the system.

Soldiers may no longer be in the streets, but the generals remain in key posts. They rule at the Interior Ministry, which runs the various police systems, in key departments of the party's Central Committee and in 11 regional governments, including those of Warsaw. Krakow, Gdansk and Katowice. Many of the 8.000 officers sent out as military crossroads. Anything can happen, given the population's state of desperation. The church has denonneed widespread poverty. Leeb Walesa's recent meeting with clan-destine leaders of Solidarity is an additional sign of tension. A confidential letter from General Jaruzelski to high officials shows that the regime is aware of the risks in a food price increase of between 10 and 50 percent scheduled for Jan. I. Price increases in 1956, 1970 and 1980 led to rebellions. The 1980 rebellion gave birth to the independent union Solidarity. Warsaw's recent decisions aim toward a system of dissuasion and repression. The plan appears to be to put down feared displays of pub-lic discontent, despite the consequences of resort to force.

Meanwhile, the prospect of Latin American-style dictatorship by a career general raises the issue of the army's role in a communist state. The army plays an important role in the Soviet Union. The support given Yuri Andropov by a clique of portant factor in his rise to power But in the Soviet Union it is the Communist Party that rules; so far the army bas always accepted its secondary role - that of a pressure group, a very powerful lobby, but subservient to the party.

Even in the Soviet Union, there is much friction among the diverse power sectors. What will happen in Poland, where military officers have replaced the finest civilian assistance that the party could muster?

By discarding its role as an instrument of transition and remaining firmly in power, the Polish army revises its traditional function defense of the nation rather than of a regime run by a corrupt and mept caste. The army has nothing to gain by being linked closely to the regime and its hated police.

If it were to govern directly, the situation throughout the country would probably be improved in the long run — although that would require dialogue with the population. But the army's prestige would suffer, both within Poland and in the Warsaw Pact.

The day has not come when the Russians, despite their trust in General Jaruzelski, are willing to install their SS-21 missiles in Poland. Moscow is wary of the Polish army and has good reason to worry about its loyalty to communism, particularly since the disclosure of a letter signed by 'a group of officers."

The letter — the first of its kind to become known — accuses the ruling Polish generals of treason for acting under the orders of a foreign power. "The Polisb army," it says, "instead of defending the nation against its foreign enemies, has be-come a jailer and oppressor of its own countrymen."

The representativity of the "group of officers" is difficult to gauge, but historians might do well to clip this document to General Jaruzelski's commission as new commander in chief.

Pakistan: When a Democracy Ignores Democrats By Eqbal Ahmad

WASHINGTON — Too little no-tice has been paid to the civil disobedience movement in Pakistan. Millions are demanding democracy. As nonviolence elicits only contempt from General Mohammed Zia ul-Haq's regime. Pakistanis are grad-ually turning to armed struggle. The controlled press reports increasing ambushes, bombings and sabotage.

For Washington, this is ominous in the strategically crucial country of 83 million, bounded by Afghanistan, Iran, China, India and the Gulf. Here lie the small fuses of disputed borders and ethnic divisions that historically have ignited great wars. Here the frontiers of American and Soviet influence collide. Here Moscow's opportunities are enormous — and its restraint is tested.

The Movement for the Restoration Democracy, a coalition of eight banned political parties, leads the campaign. Its demands reflect the minimum national consensus: immediate end to military rule, free elections, restoration of constitutional government. General Zia, who has repeatedly reneged on pledges of free elections, rejects the demands, offering instead "nonparty" elections to dress military rule in civilian clothes.

Pakistan's ethnic diversity and deep involvement in Afghanistan complicate the situation. The army comes largely from the Punjab; the opposition movement is strongest in other provinces, especially Sind. home of Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, the late prime minister. Sind, with 20 million people, long the most oppressed of the four provinces, was further alienated by the regime's execution of Mr.

Bhutto in 1979. Recent killings have been mostly in Sind; there have been none in the Punjab, where protesters are treated relatively moderately.

The regime exploits the specter of secessionism to legitimize repression - although the coalition opposes secession. Yet resentments do smolder, especially in Sind and Baluchistan. As earlier in East Pakistan (the pre-sent Bangladesh), secessionism may emerge when the opposition fails to restore democracy.

In most towns people have courted arrest by their demands; often they are beaten before being jailed. At least 200 people have been shot dead and several villages have been destroyed. Millions have defied the ban on assembly of more than four per-sons, blocked government offices, lain down to stop traffic.

Some 23,000 have been jailed without trial; 175 dissenters have been flogged despite Pakistan Medical Association appeals to discontinue that punishment. The regime has closed a newspaper and dismissed journalists. nine of them for condemning excessive repression. Lawyers are abused for advocating the rule of law.
On Sept. 29, when troops killed

37 and wounded hundreds blocking traffic. U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, visiting Pakistan, as-sured the junta that the United States remained its "strong and reliable ally." The next day he addressed Afghan guerrillas near Peshawar, at what he described, without shame or irony, as "the frontier of freedom." Lacking domestic constituencies.

senior Pakistani officials are sensitive only to their group interests and to foreign benefactors. Signs of division among them appeared in September when General F.A. Chisbti, General Zia's key collaborator in the 1977 coup, publicly favored moderation in eovernment attitudes. But anxious officers could view the Weinberger visit as America's scal of approval for the regime's repression. Pakistan is too heterogeneous to be held together by a repressive ethnic army. Its insurrectionary inhabitants share not only borders but also historic, linguistic and ethnie affinities with neighboring countries, which get effectively involved in each other's internal conflicts. India did so in 1971 when, disregarding Washington's "tilt" to Pakistan, it midwifed Bangladesh's birth, Pakistan is doing so now, serving as a conduit of American arms and providing sanctuaries to the Afghan rebels.

If Moscow and Kabul decided to retaliate, they could not choose a better time. Afghanistan is host to prominent Pakistani leaders. There are some 10,000 Pakistani political exiles there, including 8,500 seasoned Baluch and Pakhtun fighters. So far, Soviet and Afghan authorities have prevented the dissidents from reentering Pakistan. Thus Pakistan has been ill-served by America, which failed to guarantee its security but helped deny democracy.

Ironically, Pakistan owes its post-Bangladesh stability to Soviet realism: Pakistan is a buffer between the Soviet Union and India, Moscow's unused leverage - the threat of Af-General Zia's role in Afghanistan. But if his regime retains power it will grow more repressive, more dependent on America, more amenable to the American mission of fighting the Russians to the last Afghan.

If a Pakistani civil war developed as new American arms entered Afghanistan, Moscow might support General Zia's adversaries. Washington would then have three options engage in a major land war in Asia, abandon Pakistan or risk using theater nuclear weapons.

Africa: More Than Drought

Whenever countries are unable to feed themselves, people blame it on mismanagement, corruption, etc. [The African] countries were under colonial rule until 20 years ago, so they cannot be compared to countries that have been independent for hundreds of years. They have inherited a situation where the whole economy was focused on the production of tropical products that were required by the markets of the colonial powers -cocoa, sugar, coffee, tea. The colonial powers selected the best land and built railways and roads just to reach those crops. The food crop was left to the small farmers with little land in very remote areas. All the research was for the intensification of production of the eash crops, and those crops are doing very well. We have surpluses today, and as a result the prices are very low in real terms, 15 percent less than in 1962.

The future is trade. You can double, triple or quadruple the aid; it will not do. Trade brings in 50 times more than aid. I laugh when I see a minister from Europe preaching to the African countries what they must do to produce more. The smallest farmer knows better than any minister from any developed country how to produce more. What is lacking is the financial means — credits, fertilizers, seeds and a [better] price for the farmer.

NEW YORK - No tropical fruits, sardines or foreign foods of any kind will be served to the U.S. army for any purpose, it was learned with the revelation of a general order issued by Secretary of War George H. Dern prohibiting the purchase of any foreign food for those serving in the army in the United States. The only exceptions to the "Eat American" regulation are tea, coffee, cocoa, ebocolate and spices. The order was brought to light when the army hospital at Governor's Island asked the commissary to issue bananas for some of the patients. Medical officers were amazed when advised that the new order prevented the purchase of bananas or any tropical fruit.

El Salvador: Get Rid of the Death Squads or Get Out

By James Chace

N EW YORK — The United States should try to persuade the armed forces of El Salvador to discipline officers involved in the 25sassination squads that have killed thousands of civilians in the last three years. Should it fail to do so, it must withdraw military and economic aid. even if this means carnage by the right or victory for the left. Thus far, U.S. strategy has been to pursue the first course, even though the results have been profoundly discouraging. To "orofessionalize" the army, as Washington calls it, means changing the nature of the officer corps, whose links to the intransigent right wing are stronger than ever.

One way of doing this, U.S. advisers believe, is to train, 21 Fort Beaning, Georgia, many cadets who will become junior officers in an enlarged Salvadoran army. But even if those new officers become committed to reforming the army and suppressing right-wing violence, it will take years for their influence to be felt. Limited in number and handicapped by low rank, they will face the intolerance of older officers and are unlikely to turn against their superiors.

Like the South Vietnamese regime. the Salvadoran government must win not only the hattle against the guerrillas but also the "hearts and minds" of the people. To this end the United States has until recently tried to per-suade the army that it should rehabilitate the provinces in which it has neen fighting. By repairing roads, opening schools and improving health care, the army would demonstrate its concern for the population.

In fact, however, few soldiers have been made available for a plan that many Salvadoran commanders feel is "made in North America" and not suited to the waging of a successful war. Worse, the U.S.-trained Atlacati Battalion was involved in murdering about 100 civilians in an anti-guerrilla offensive this month.

the national police - all of which report in General Eugenio Vides Casanova, the defense minister. The Salvadoran Commission on Human Rights, which operates under the auspices of the Roman Catholic Church, claims that 2,700 people were killed by such groups during the first six months of this year. Even the U.S. Embassy has openly abandoned the idea that there is any clear distinction between the higher military command and the death squads. The army is moving to the right. U.S. diplomais admit. The mere possibility that Jose Napoleon Duarte, the Christian Democrats' nominee, could win an election is thought to be enough to provoke a coup. So most of the Salvadorans I spoke with believe that the candidate of the right will be elected the next president.

It also seems unlikely that any candidate sponsored by the right will be able to crack down on the terror. Elections, without the participation of the left, may be free, but they may produce an outcome that Washingon will find unacceptable, as happened in the last election when a right-wing coalition tried to put in its own man and Washington had to intervene. The right understands this, but prefers to believe that the Reagan administration's commitment to prevent a Marxist takeover is so great that it will never abandon the army. Washington must make clear to the Salvadoran government that it will pull out if the killing of civilians is not stopped. The United States will, and should, go on trying to change the nature of the armed forces until it concludes that this is a futile task something that may finally become clear after the elections. At that point, a U.S. withdrawal would be the logical alternative, even though this risks a guerrilla victory. Withdrawal of military support would be extremely difficult for any squads are back at work, with the administration. In Havana, the Cuconnivance of the the army, the na- bans now acknowledge their tutelage

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

What About First Use?

In a message from President Leonid Brezhnev transmitted to the United Nations General Assembly on June 16, 1982, the Soviet Union assumed an obligation not to be the first to use nuclear weapons. It was a unilateral, unconditional commitment, declared to be effective from the moment it was announced. I submit that President Yuri Andropov's threat to introduce tactical nuclear missiles to Czechoslovakia and the German Democratic Republic contradicts this commitment.

For short-range nuclear weapons stationed close to the dividing line between the NATO and Warsaw Pact forces have all the characteristics of first-use weapons. In case of conflict they would have to be fired first to avoid the risk of their being destroyed or overrun by the enemy.

Enrope, I have followed the Enropean missile crisis with no small measure of concern. America and its NATO allies are well advised to deploy cruise missiles as a justifiable deterrent and a measured response to the deployed Soviet SS-20s. However, with the last hopes of an arms agreement with the Soviets on these weapon systems now gone, deploy-ment of Pershing-2 missiles in West Germany should be postponed.

The possible deployment of Pershing-2s was primarily justifiable as leverage to reach an arms agreement with the Soviet Union. Actual deployment of Pershing-2s in West Oermany, however, is a strategic es-calation of the arms race. The Soviets possess no such counter-system capable of delivering nuclear warheads to vital areas of the United States within 10 minutes, nor would any attempt by the Soviets to deploy such a sys-tem be acceptable to America. Fur-thermore, deployment of Pershing-2s may cause the Soviets to adopt a launch-on-warning policy.

Deployment of Pershing-2s in West Germany should be reconsidered while the deployment of cruise missiles continues PAUL H. NADEAU. Aberdeen, Scotland.

Credibility Called Issue In Japan Vote

Nakasone Emphasizing Images of Statesmanship

TOKYO - Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, facing a general election next month, said Tuesday that Japan needs him to maintain its international credibility. Mr. Nakasone was forced to dissolve the lower house of parliament Monday. Opposition parties had blocked business in the parliament, or Diet, following the conviction on bribery charges of former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka, one of his main political backers.

"If we lose the election, then the credibility of Japan and the party will go down," Mr. Nakasone told officials of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party.

The prime minister appeared to be trying to extract maximum ad-vantage from visits this month by President Ronald Reagan and other leaders.

Japanese television devoted much time to showing Mr. Nakasone in friendly but earnest conversation with Mr. Reagan, Chancel-lor Helmnt Kohl of West Germany and Hu Yaobang, leader of China's Communist Party.

Russians Said to Increase SS-20s in Asia

By Karen DeYoung

TOKYO - The Soviet Union is increasing the number of SS-20 missiles deployed in Asia from 108 to as many as 144, according to Japanese and U.S. officials here.

But the Japanese government sees the new Asian deployments as threats and actions that have vastly enhanced its efforts to build public support for expanded Japanese defenses and a closer relationship with the Western alliance.

Perhaps the stylizing of the stage movement was meant to owe something to Oriental theater, too, which would account for the attractive but otherwise anomalous slidserved as the stage curtain.

Some of the special effects were represent the flight of birds moving into a cross formation, or were even Messiaen not only went to the jarring, as was the surgical preci-Assist area and as far afield as the sion with which laser beams applied the stigmata.

Messisen never seems to have had much trouble getting a bearing for even his most gigantic scores (particularly in the United States and Japan), but "St. Francis of Assisi" may be headed for the concert hall rather than the opera bouse in the long run. That the composer was given carte blanche and a prestigious platform for what is almost certainly his last major statement is to everyone's credit, but a reckless disregard of theatrical limitations and the stamina of operagoers will surely take its toll.

'Poppy': Peter Nichols's Angry Pantomime Is an Adventurous Musical

elsewhere, there's still not much uses his immense orchestra with doubt in my mind that Peter Nicheconomy and consideration for the ols's angry pantomime "Poppy" remains the most adventurous and intriguing musical in town.

> True, it still doesn't altogether work, and if anything the cracks in the structure that were apparent a year ago have actually widened with the injection of a great deal of pre-Broadway American money and the arrival of Onna White as choreographer, not to mention an almost all-new cast, the one survivor from the original being Geofning dame whose main contribution to the first night was to advance to the footlights and

But to understand what makes ing, indeed given its ballneinogenic, one might say addictive, theme. we need to set it in the context of much of the author's earlier work. Just as "The National Health" was built on the structure of television hospital soap-operas, just as "Pri-vates on Parade" was constructed out of the old wartime revue fabric. so "Poppy" derives directly from a tacky English pantomime convention, and just what Broadway andiences are going to unscramble from that remains to be seen.

So, what we have here first of all is a pantomime, indeed one originally conceived not for the Barbican at all but for the seedier surroundings of the Theatre Royal, Stratford East. We have a dame, a principal boy who is of course a girl (Antonia Ellis), the usual two-man borse, a principal girl who is really a girl and then we have the study of British opium-pushing in China a century ago, which is what the show is all about.

And that is where the troubles of "Poppy" really start. For not only can no pantomime sustain or con-tain all that Nichols wants to say about the appalling behavior of the going on here and some of it is locked all its brains in the heels of British in the Far East a century or smashing: set-piece numbers like its tap shoes. In that sense "Poppy" by realized that what went wrong so ago, but no pantomime nowa"Rock-a-bye Randy," in which is an unmissable treat. But it still with the original version was Sir "Poppy" so consistently enthrall- British in the Far East a century or panto-musical, and within less than three bours it now has to contain (1) all the trappings of Victorian pantomime, (2) all that Nichols wants to say about colonial corruption, and (3) massive Broadway dance numbers conceived by Onna White, who looks as though she ond-half drift toward "The King > Pacific Overtures" (a remarkably the show has been tightened consimilar and equally fascinating ex-ercise in mismatched Oriental form and content) Nichols finds himself defeated by his own framework: "Privates on Parade" bad a deep internal logic because its central velously cast to give the show a characters plausibly belonged to whilf of genuine Victorian tat. But the Malaysian touring revue company they were also parodying. "Poppy" never satisfactorily ex-plains why pantomime should be the format for an attack on drugrunning, and indeed styles are now so coofused that at the end of the first half, for no very clear reason, we get a kind of underwater Esther Williams nude ballet projected on a screen at the back of the stage, as though left over from the last reviv-

Briefschwerdt Called Likely Choice To Become Daimler Chief Executive At Dunlop

Damiler Benz AG's supervisory board meets Taursday afternoon to choose a new chief erecurive, and analysis in London and Frankfurt are putting their money on Werner Breitschwerdt.

Mr. Breitschwerdt, 56, the West German automaker's head of research and development, has been with Daimler-Benz since 1953. Tim Stevenson, an analyst with the London-based brokerage Savory Milln, de-scribed him as a "technical-minded chap."

Gerhard Prinz, the previous chief executive died of a heart attack last month after less than four years in the post. Management members of the supervisory board are said to favor Mr. Breitschwerdt to succeed him, and have the support of the sapervisory board chairman, Wilfried Guft.

Mr. Guth is also co-head of Deutsche Bank AG, which holds 28 percent of the equity of Daimler Benz.

Trade-union members of the board are said to back Edzard Reuter, head of finance for Daimler-Benz, who originally was seen as Mr. Prinz's most likely successor.

Fraser To Resign

Move Was Forced

By Bob Hagerty

LONDON - Dunlop Holdings. the troubled British tiremaker, announced Tuesday that Sir Camp-bell Fraser would step down as chairman at the end of the year.

A company spokesman denied widespread press reports that Sir Campbell, 60, was being forced to resign and insisted that it was a routine retirement. But the spokesman conceded that some shareholders had suggested that the chairman should leave.

The flap is an embarrassment for Sir Campbell, one of Britain's most prominent businessmen and president of the Confederation of British Industry. It is also another indignity for the once mighty

Last week Dunlop was removed as one of the 30 shares making up the Financial Times industrial index and replaced by the hotel company Trusthouse Forte. The FT judged that Dunlop was no longer an accurate representative of the British auto-parts industry. In September, the deht-laden company sold most of its European tire business to Sumito Rubber Industries of Japan for £82 million ($120 million).

. The sale leaves Dunlop with the cost of closing its unprofitable tire plants in Birmingham, England, and in central France. The French unit went into receivership last month. Dunlop closed its tire plant in Cork, Ireland. in September. The company still owns profitable tire businesses in the United States and South Africa, but analysts say it may have to sell one or both of those operations to survive, A total withdrawal from tires would leave Dunlop with a poten-tially profitable business in a wide range of consumer and industrial products, including golf balls, foam beds, boots, aircraft parts and flexi-ble pipes for oil wells. A crucial element in Dunlop's struggle is a long-anticipated pay-men of £55 million on its sale of half its 51-percent interest in Dun-lop Malaysian Industries to Pegi Malaysia BHD, a Malaysian in-vestment company. The payment images on Malaysian government approval, and analysts are uncertain of the prospects.

Bayer Profit Up 77% in 9 Months

LEVERKUSEN, West Germany — Bayer's world group pretax profit rose 77.1 percent in the first nine months from the like 1982 period, to 1.36 billion Deutsche marks ($503.7 million) on volume of 27.69 billion DM, the company's board chairman, Herbert Grünewald, said Tuesday.

Asked if the dividend would be raised from the 4 DM paid on 1982 results, he said it would if results were better, and in a separate comment he predicted a record world group profit in 1983. He also said the company had no plans for major changes m its capital.

Mr. Grünewald said world group volume, which rose 4.7 percent in the first nine months, was expected to show 5.5-percent-to-6-percent growth for the year. He said all divisions contributed to the improved profit, particularly the group's U.S. units, which showed a $130-milhon pretax profit in the first three quartets as business picked up and measures to cut losses yielded results.

Bad Quarter Drains U.S. Bond Traders

Wall Street Must Master a Fundamental New Economics

By Michael Blumstein New York Times Service

NEW YORK — As the long, hot summer dragged on, a sense of gloom settled over the bond traders in Wall Street's brokerage houses. Interest rates were rising again to levels not seen in a year, and the oncefrantic trading in notes and bonds was drying up fast. Traders could only sit by and watch glumly as their bond inventories dropped in value,
"It was a very draining experience," said a munici pal bond trader for one major brokerage firm. "You're sitting there, saying, 'How am I going to get out of these bonds?"

In fact, they could not, and with the securities industry becoming increasingly dependent on bond trading, and other so-called principal transactions, the bottom line at the end of the third quarter came as somewhat of a shock after the riches of the past year.

The mighty Merrill Lynch was bumbled the most, with a 67 percent drop in profits from the like period last year. And almost every other major securities firm suffered sizable declines, as well: E.F. Hutton. down 33 percent; Paine Webber, down 39 percent; Dean Witter Reynolds, down 18 percent; First Boston, down 50 percent; Phibro-Salomon, down 13 percent, and Prudential-Bache actually had a loss.

For most, the drop in profits was even more dramatic when compared with the glorious earnings of the three previous quarters. And the troubles that produced the third-quarter decline have led some to conclude that 1984 may be just as much of a struggle.

The paradox of this collapse is that it occurred when trading in stocks was at levels that should have had brokers dancing in the streets. The Dow Jones industrial average closed at new highs six times during July, August and September, and average daily volume on the New York Stock Exchange was 15 percent higher than the year before,

But stock market trading, while still vital, is shrink-ing as a source of income for top securines firms. The big institutions, such as banks and pension funds that do the lion's share of the trading, have pushed commissions down to 5 cents a share on average.

At the same time, deficit-laden governments and cash-hungry corporations have flooded the deht mar-ket with bonds and other fixed-income securities. And Mr. Lund said. as interest rates have become more volatile in recent (Continued on Page 11, Col. 5)

U.S. Trade Gap Last Month Grew To Set a Record

deficit in merchandise trade widened to a record 58.97 billion in October as oil imports went up while soybean and coal exports fell, the Commerce Department said Tuesday. The deficit, at $55.56 billion for the first 10 months of 1983. unreatens to exceed $70 billion for the year, or almost twice last year's record $42.7 billion.

"It will probably go above the $70-hillion range for sure now," the department's trade economist, David Lund, said after the figures were released.

The enormous size of the October deficit surprised analysis, but the trend for the year has been pointing toward a record annual deficit ever since the U.S. economic recovery started while the rest of the world remained in recession. The recovery has huilt the appetite for imports, which climbed 11.7 percent from September to October, while exports remain hurdened by a dollar considered overvalued in relation to other currencies, October exports, down 2.5 percent from September, were $16.95 hillion while imports were $25.9 hillion, after seasonal adjustment.

"I hope it's not a long-playing record." Mr. Lund said as he reviewed the October numbers, The previous monthly record for the merchandise trade deficit was $7.2 hillion, in August. October was the sixth month this year to

"It goes without saying, imports were up strongly, reflected particularly by nonoil imports, which rose to $19.5 billion in October from

France Reports Surplus on Its Current Account

The Associated Press PARIS - The Finance Ministry said France's current ac-count in the third quarter registered a seasonally adjusted surplus of 2.4 hillion francs ($292 million) after deficits of 7.6 billion francs in the second quarter and 27.4 billion francs in the first quarter.

The current account measures trade in merchandise and payments for certain nontangible items such as services, tour-ism and royalties. The ministry said the sharp improvement was due to a steep reduction in the merchandise trade deficit in the third quarter.

Meanwhile, National Statistics Institute said Tuesday that retail prices rose 2.2 percent in he three months that ended in October and 4.3 percent in the six months through October. The institute revised the October retail price rise to 0.8 percent, bringing the rate of in-crease over the past 12 months to 10.4 percent, up from 10. 1

A MESSAGE TO OUR SHAREHOLDERS

We are gratified by the overwhelming support we have received from our shareholders and our employees. We appreciate your confidence in us.

For those of you who haven't voted yet, please remember that we must receive your proxy by this Friday, December 2. This is a crucial vote for all Gulf shareholders. Your vote is vital. It gives you an opportunity to help enable your Company to continue in the sound strategic direction that Gulf has been pursuing—a strategy that has led to 10 consecutive years of increases in dividend payments.

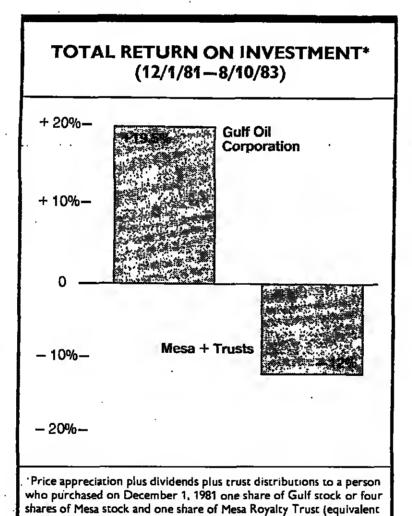

You have a choice, a voice, and a vote. But you must act quickly.

In this proxy contest, the Mesa Group—headed by T. Boone Pickens, Jr., — has sought to convince you that their interests are the same as yours. We don't believe it.

Remember what Mr. Pickens said as recently as October 19... after his group had bought a substantial number of Gulf shares... "I just work for one crowd; that's the Mesa stockholder."*

Let's look at the recent record — ours and theirs.

The chart that follows shows the total return on Gulf stock from the time I became Gulf's chairman (December 1, 1981) until the Pickens Group began purchasing our stock. Gulf's total return is up approximately 19.5%; Mesa's total return (including both royalty trusts) is down approximately 12%.

IF YOU DON'T VOTE, IT'S THE SAME AS A VOTE AGAINST.

We believe our solid record of accomplishment deserves your support and your vote FOR management's proposal. But you must also know that abstaining from voting is the same as voting against the proposal, since approval requires that more than 50 percent of the company's outstanding shares be voted for it.

EVERY VOTE COUNTS

Your latest dated proxy is the only one that counts. Even if you have previously signed a Blue opposition proxy, you can still change your mind.

Please express your support of Gulf's proposal by signing, dating, and mailing the WHITE proxy card. And please do it now. While you still have a choice. And a voice. And a vote.

IMPORTANT

Because time is so short before the December 2 Special Meeting, we have arranged for you to vote, if you wish, by sending a Datagram. The procedure is simple and costs you nothing:

- 1. Call Western Union toll-free 1-800-325-6000 any time day or night (in Missouri only, dial 1-800-342-6700)
- 2. Tell the operator you want to send a prepaid Datagram charged to I.D. #F7082
- 3. The operator will have a complete copy of the WHITE management proxy card. Please tell the operator:

 I want to vote all my Gulf shares FOR the proposed reorganization.
- 4. Give the operator your name, address and telephone number. If you are not a record owner, tell the operator your authority to send the proxy.
- 5. Western Union will then send a Datagram to Gulf reflecting your vote.

If your shares are registered in nominee name with your brokerage firm or bank, only they may vote your shares, and only upon receipt of your specific instructions. To ensure that your shares will be voted, please instruct the party responsible for your account to execute a WHITE proxy on your behalf immediately.

If you have any questions or need assistance in voting your shares registered in bank or nominee name, you are encouraged to call Georgeson & Co. Inc. at (212) 440-9800 in New York, U.S.A., or in London, England at 01-636-2361. Please call collect.

If you have any questions or need assistance in voting your shares registered in broker name, you are encouraged to call D. F. King & Co., Inc. at (212) 269-5550 in New York, (312) 236-5881 in Chicago, or (415) 788-1119 in San Francisco. Please call collect.

Gulf has also established the following toll-free numbers: 1-800-255-4853, and for Pennsylvania residents only 1-800-222-2152. If you cannot get through on the toll-free lines, we encourage you to call collect on the Georgeson & Co. Inc. and D. F. King & Co., Inc. telephone numbers.

Dispute With U.S. Over Steel Exports

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — European Community industry ministers sidestepped a showdown with the United States over steel exports and extended by six weeks a deadline for resolving the dispute, officials said

The deadline of midnight Wednesday was moved to Jan. 15. The dispute arose after President Ronald Reagan had imposed tariffs and quotas, last July on imports of "special" steels to the United States from the community. The EC has threatened reprisals aimed by U.S. exports of

Despite recent progress that has brought the two sides close to agreement on some issues, community diplomats were pessimistic that the dispute over compensation for the European speciality steel industry could be settled before the January deadline and predicted that retaliatory measures would be adopted.

Panasonic Shows Portable Computer

LAS VEGAS (NYT) - Panasonic, a division of Japan's Matsushita Electric Co. has introduced a portable computer that some analysts said could be the most successful Japanese entry to date in the U.S. market. The new machine is about the size of a small suitcase and can run most of the programs written for the International Business Machine Corp. Personal Computer. The Panasonic machine appears to be priced lower than many other computers that can use IBM programs.

Harvard Grants License to Biogen

NEW YORK (NYT) - Harvard University says that it has obtained U.S. and European patents on a new genetic-engineering process and that it had granted an exclusive license to the technique to Biogen, a Netherlands-based biotechnology company whose chairman, Walter Gilbert, a former Harvard professor, invented the process.

The issuance of the patent, which was announced Monday, ended a long-standing dispute between Harvard and the University of California, whose faculty applied for a similar patent and contested Harvard's claim to the invention.

The process is expected to aid in the commercial production of

Account in October

TOKYO - Japan's current account surplus declined to $2.28 billion in October from $2.69 billion in September, and compared with a $1.43-billion surplus a year earlier, the Finance Ministry said Tuesday. The current account is a broad trade measure that includes merchandise as well as nonmerchandise items such as services.

The trade surplus, which includes merchandise, dropped to $3.09 billion in October from $3.37 billion in September and compared with a $1.94-billion surplus a year earlier, it said.

Meanwhile, a private group, the Research Institute of the National Economy, said Tuesday it expects the Japanese economy to grow an average, inflation-adjusted 3.7 percent a year in the next 10 years. while its international payment surpluses will more than double in the decade.

rapid rates. This has pushed bond trading onto center stage as the most important source of revenue for the brokerage industry.

Principal transactions, primarily trading in bonds and notes, rose to 26 percent of industry revenues, from 15 percent in 1978, according to the New York Stock Exchange. By contrast commissions from stocks listed on exchanges declined to 20 percent of industry revenues last year, from 33 percent in 1978. What this depicts is a fundamental change in the economies of Wall Street. It is not only the profitability of U.S. business and stock tradng volume that will govern the future prosperity of the securities industry. Interest rates, too, will determine its financial health more than ever before. Wall Street must learn to master this oew structure, and judging from the third-quarter performance, that mastery lies somewhere in the future.

said recently. In the changing Wall Street environment, a key to success is the size of a firm's bond and note inventory and, just as importantly, how well it manages that inventory.

"If you're in the trading business, you've got to hold inventory in what you trade," said Robert E. Linton, chairman and chief executive of Drexel Burnham Lambert and outgoing chairman of the Securitles Industry Association. "That's

The risk, however, is that the inventory will decline in price if rates move up while the securities are on the shelf waiting to be re-

In addition, they say that securities firms trading bonds and notes may be able to hedge with increas-ing ease against unfavorable interest-rate movements once the options and futures markets become larger and more liquid.

The short-term outlook for the industry is slightly clearer. Virtual-

THIRD PERSON RURAL: Further Essays of a Sometime Farmer

By Noel Perrin. 188 pp. $13.95. Godine, 306 Dartmouth St., Boston, Mass. 02116.

Reviewed by Peter Davison

THERE was of course a time when farming was what everyone did to supplement some other gainless occupation. The schoolteacher, the doctor, the preacher and their wives kept a calf or a pig or a garden, or all three, to support the pursuits they had been specially educated by society to perform. Now most of us who keep farms have got to do something else to raise the money to pay the taxes, build the soil, and keep the land clear. Government subsidy, not unjustly, is reserved for those who farm at the highest level of technological professional-

Noel Perrin's essays on the rural life can be enjoyed even by most professionals. He en-larges the ranks of those who — like Horace, Virgil, Gilbert White, Henry David Thoreau, Robert Frost, and E.B. White — have managed to make the best of farming by writing about it, such as a friend of mine who at great pains to himself commutes to a large city hundreds of miles a week to earn the cash to support his family on a drafty upland farm.

Noel Perrin would seem to have arranged his life perfectly to support a farm. He teaches at Dartmouth, as Sidney Cox and Robert Frost did before him, and he knows enough about farming to write very well indeed about the process. At present he is living in Vermont. "Third Person Rural," for those who don't know is his third volume (and, he says, his last) of essays on the bucolic life, written originally for such magazines as Country Journal, Ver-mont Life, or Horticulture. He is to farming what that eloquent physician, Lewis Thomas, is to medicine. Like E.B. White, he can make using what we wood-splitters, hay-makers, pig-sloppers encounter as dreary labor. He can reach behind the ordinary for a moment that lights up experience, as he does in a modest and charming description of how to round up an escaped bull calf. He can throw away moral lessons about human interdependence, as in the same essay. The sure way to tell a true countryman is not by his clothes, or the dilapidation of his truck, or even his accent. It's by how he responds to cattle on the road. A true countryman, even if he were on his way to his wedding, would stop and help you drive them back in." And, because he is a delighted amateur of farming rather than a hard-bitten professional, he can adopt a tone of unprofession-al urgency about feedlots and unjust taxes, just as Thomas, leavened by poetry, can take posi-tions on medicine as an art that the simon-pure might call unscientific.

In fact, it's not too much to call Perrin, like White or Thomas, a sort of national treasure— even though Perrin in his modesty might want us to limit the claim to something as unprepos-sessing as "regional asset." But that would sound too professional. Read these essays if you want to know about the art of potatotasting, or why not to use a drayhorse to graze off your overgrown pasture, or why cows probably disapprove of vegetarians, or why it is. better to farm badly than too well. Having just written this review to help pay the taxes on my barn, I find him a reliable instructor as to the virtues of small-scale maple sugaring, a discerning critic of the weather, an illuminating theoretician when it comes to land taxes. He mixes the useful with the sweet.

What I value most about Perm's writing is: what I value about rural life itself: like those who write well about it, country life gives you a shot of modesty right between the eyes. You cannot control the weather or the seasons or the way crops germinate and animals give birth. "But something," as Robert Frost wrote, "has to be left to God." Permi never vaunteth. himself, is not puffed up. He is amusing but passionate, he is craftsmanlike. He likes to quote Frost in the true version of the "Complete Poems" as written by Frost, not in those repunctuated by Lathem. He has made only one mistake in this book, and even that may have been his publishers' fault. The woodcus, by Robin Brickman give an edge of coyness to the appearance of a book that has reason to appear surer of its claims.

Peter Davison's most recent book is "Barn. Fever and Other Poems," but he could not seriously be called a farmer. He wrote this review for The Washington Post.

Probably it was significant that the goal that put the final beyond doubt came off the knee of Ron Furcher, an average English sec-ond-division forward whose very presence was a cheat. According to NASL relugations, he should have been hanned after receiving three official cautions in the playoff se-

So how did he become an all-American winner? Because, in the tangled ethics of NASL President Howard Samuels, Futcher's misbehavior was something to be overlooked "in the interests of the sport and the game of tomorrow."

Heaven knows, Pelé, the real game would never have let you off had you retaliated oftener to the hatchet men of your time.

When rule-bender Samuels was elected in June 1982, he told us: "The NASL's belief in its future is undiminished. But while much of real pro football is merely banal and venal, Gent's vision of Dallas football is conspiratorial and exaggerated: a bagman commissioner, a union leader flung out of an airplane, a beamiful carhop who becomes a club owner, a crooked quarterback; mob infiltration, a crusading sportswriter tortured to death, a crazed Vietnam veteran, dead and injured children galore.

"Football is not a metaphor for life," Gent said during a recent visit to New York, "It is life.

The Art of Dying in Films

By Russell Baker

N EW YORK — Richard Loo died for the last time in Los Angeles the other day. He was 80,

50-year career and had died in a grateful. fair proportion of them. Though his roots were Chinese, he was in great demand for roles as Japanese villains during World War II and, as his daughter said, "was always either stabbing himself or commit-ting hara-kiri or kamikaze because he never got the best of the the slightest sensation of unseemly behavior.

this confession as proof that I was besotted with anti-Asian racism cooked up by III. cooked up by U.S. propagandists to promote the war effort against Japan. To which I say, "Poppy-

What made Loo's deaths so easy to cheer was much simpler than racism. First, you always knew he would be back at this devilish business of tormenting American GIs before the month was out at the movie theater. Second, he always died in good taste.

Even when committing hara-kiri, he was neat about it. I wish presentday movie actors would study his work. When a movie actor faces a violent end nowadays, the audience has to put up with a mess so gory that only the strongest stomach can go on digesting the popoorn.

When the scene is over, they are not a jot deader than Loo was after prodding a wooden sword at his entrails and grimacing a lew times to indicate a hara-kin im progress.

I am unable to determine whether Loo holds the record for dying on film. Dying was not a highly respected skill when Hollywood produced movies like sausages, and those who did it rarely received much attention. To this day there is no Academy Award for the best dying performance.

Most of those who died for a living were bit players who had scarcely a line before being plugged by Randolph Scott or John Wayne. These actors were so little valued that the studios rarely even wasted

Angeles the other day. He was 80, to occur after fatal movie shoothad acted in about 150 films over a ings, and for this I was always

There was a period of my life when I watched Barton MacLane set shot to death two or three times a month, and deservedly so on each occasion. Never once did I see Barton MacLane bleed. I class him up there close to Loo as a rat who knew how to die like a gentleman.

Stars, of course, hardly ever died. Forty years ago and thereabouts
I saw Loo die many times and, though it may seem shameful nowadays, cheered each death without the slightest sensation of unseemly lead, might roll down a long flight of stone steps, which could make

> Americans who grew up on these old studio movies could hardly es-cape the impression that a violent end, though undesirable, could nevertheless be achieved with nearness. It was shocking to encounter the real thing — the work of a razor, a meat cleaver, a shotgun — when I started newspaper work.

Fresent-day movies with their prurient close-ups of ax work, chainsaw applications and shotgun attacks on the buman body are no more accurate at capturing the real thing than the old bloodless Hollywood product.

The aim now seems to be to titillate a public appetite for disgust. The notion that they might send the audience out with a healthy repugnance for violence is such transparent baloney that no sensible filmmaker even proposes it.

Audiences may be different, but they are no dumber than they were 40 years ago when Richard Loo was playing at dying. They know the actors with the severed heads, spurting arteries and spilled intes-ines are already back at work before another camera, or at least hounding their agents for another

What has changed between Loo's heyday and "The Texas Chainsaw Massacre" is not the transparent fraudulence of the illusion; it is the aesthetic taste of the audience, which can now be entertained by being revolted.

New York Times Service NEW YORK — "They say the sea is cold, but the sea contains the hottest blood of all," said D.H. Lawrence in his poem "Whales Weep Not!"

Concerned that these warmblooded leviathans are within sight of a watery Armageddon, the Canadian poet Greg Gatenby has unearthed and commissioned hundreds of pieces of lore, poet-ry, paintings, sculpture and music for "Whales: A Celebration" (Little, Brown), rallying them into a lavish artistic tribute to all

Variously perceived as white goddesses, black roses, emperors, all species of whale and dolphin are honored by poets, including John Masefield, C.H. Sisson and Maxine Kumin; by writers and scientists from Plutarch to Carl

The wood-chopping, brush-clear-ing horse-riding chief executive, in an article in Parade magazine, advocates a fitness program combin-ing outdoor and indoor activities with careful attention to diet. Reagan, 72, writes, "I am a great believer in exercise, not only for reasons of fitness, but also sheer pleasure. So, move over, Jane Fonds, here comes the Ronald Reagan workout

Prince Edward, the youngest son of Queen Elizabeth II, sounded a bit philosophical after making his Cambridge University stage debut in Artiar Miller's "The Crucible." "Life is one big act," he commented. "You may be nervous but you don't show it." The 19-year-old prince, who played Deputy Gover-nor Danforth, the 60-year-old Puri-tan judge in the play about the 17th-century Salem, Massachusetts, witch trials, admitted having stage fright before he went on, but still found the experience thorsull found the experience thoroughly enjoyable. "The part suits him like a glove," said Nicholas Walmsley, who directed the production Monday in the chapel of the university's Jesus College. However, Edward, who is studying history and archaeology. history and archaeology at Cam-bridge, said he doubts he will appear in another university production. He said be felt the press
